Volume 85
The Colorado College
Colorado Springs, Colorado

Heather Braun & Sarah Mears

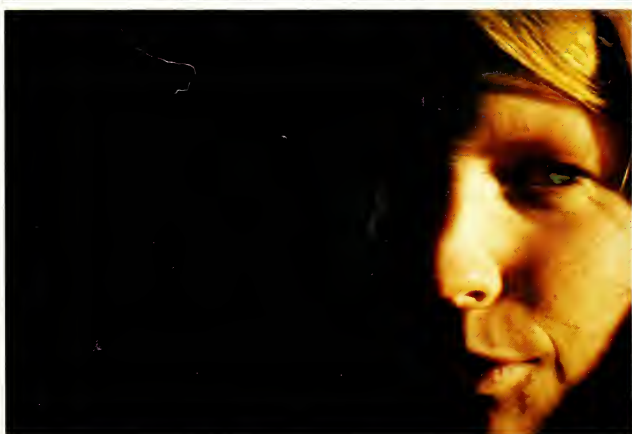

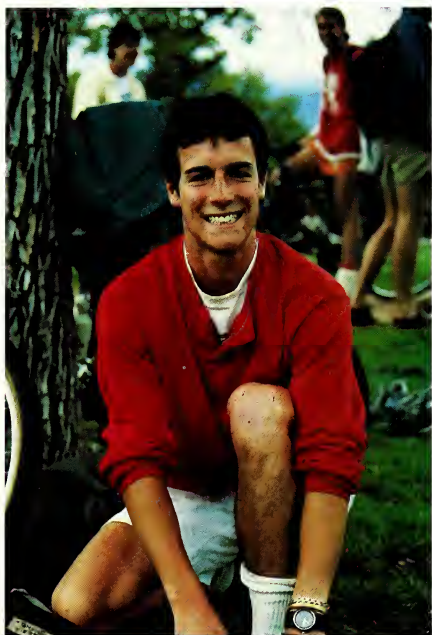

"The only men worth knowing on this campus have intelligence and sensitivity, and with few exceptions they are all GDI's."

Jonathan MCMurray

"Why is it that everything good was done by human kind, but everything bad was done by mankind?"

Dale Askey

"We always question the gender of God. Has anyone questioned the gender of Satan?"

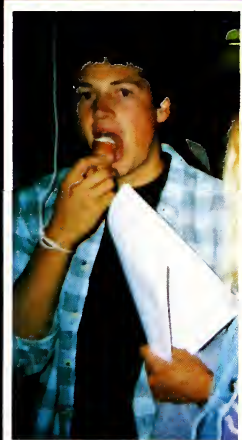

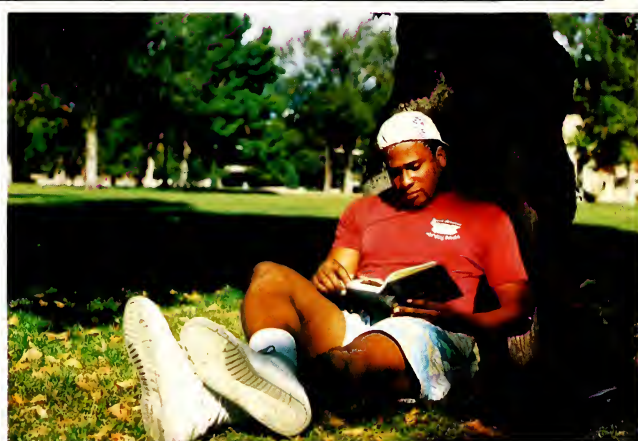

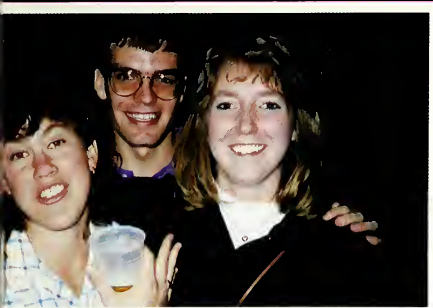

Ref.
LD
1138
JTB 1999

Jean Maurice Boyer
"After 4 years of economics classes, I still can't fathom why my tuition has increased faster than inflation."

Bennett Stichman
"No- don't take my picture now. Find me later.
Take the picture later. Find me for your next deadline."

M. Jameel Webb
"After four years here at CC, I've discovered that Old Chicagos makes really good food, Loomis is a really ucky place to live and I think I've discovered the meaning of life..."

Not only did the new law have an effect on the freshthings, the upper clasfolks had to readjust too. I.D.'s were checked at every party, and only college- trained servers were allowed to serve at parties. Will C.C. ever be the same again?

The Eight-Block Plan was suggested by faculty as a way to give them more research time and to lighten heavy class loads. The Board of Trustees approved the Plan in 1988, to be implemented in the 88-89 school year, with the reinstatement of the tradition of the Winter Symposium.

On October 7, 1988, a dedication ceremony was held in honor of the new science hall. The Friday morning symposium covered the topics of AIDS, superconductivity, and supernovas. As the year-long construction was finally "brought out" to the Colorado College Community, the students who used the facility were treated to a greatly expanded, beautifully efficient place in which to study. In addition, on two Wednesdays, October 12 and October 19, students and faculty were invited to view the recent "close encounter with Mars and some other cosmic wonders", through the science hall's new telescope and observatory.

"It takes a place secluded in the beauty of mountains with high standards of a liberal arts education to recognize relevance in irrelevance."

Anonymous"
CCcompares
to screaming orgasmalmost painful, yet beautiful."

Ken Culver
"If you float in the mainstream,
be assured you're going down the drain with the rest of em."

Eric Holcomb-"i think i can safely say no one understands quantum mechanics."

Ann Eudeikis
"To each
their own,
and if one is unable to accept others, then one is not their own."

Ryan Capp-
"Music has everything to do with everything."

Sarah
Murphy-
"Humpty Dumpty was pushed."

Liz Arnold-
"Ooh how it feels when you've got a set of wheels"

Ronald Ramirez (Exchange student)
"Strange
people, strange
place,
strange language."

Blake
Williams-
"Blood is thicker than water, but it sure doesn't taste good."

Jen Tseng -
"Um, whatever sets your jello."

Matt
Kennedy-
"Hell could be quite enjoyable, if you're into flames."

John Ori -
"Greeks at CC are like a scalding bath - after a while they're not so hot."

Uintah to the north, Cache la Poudre to the south, Nevada and Monument Creek to the east and west - CC continually expands beyond its boundaries. The Baca Campus, near Crestone, Colorado, is yet another example of our outward movement into the community and the region around us. Many classes this year spent time in Baca's incredible surroundings, opening students' minds to the emotions and energies of the Southwest.

At Baca the mood was quiet and contemplative; the seminar room housed only a fraction of the knowledge to be gained in this spiritual and physical world. In the immediate area, students discovered the Lindisfarne potters, a Buddhist temple, a Hindu Ashram, a Catholic monastery, many hiking and mountain-biking trails, and a kindred town, all full of friendly folk.

Time spent at Baca held different beauties for all who partook; the history, the colors of the mountains, and the cultures of the people in this diverse area gave common feelings of delight in the experience and regret in departure.

Kirk Solo & Michael Shaw
"Those fresh boys."

John Knych
"The drinking age really sucks and if I don't get more drugs I'll die."

Michael Ziems
"I'm totally disappointed I didn't know the gypsum rock."

Tim Cowlry
"I'm happy to have four legs."

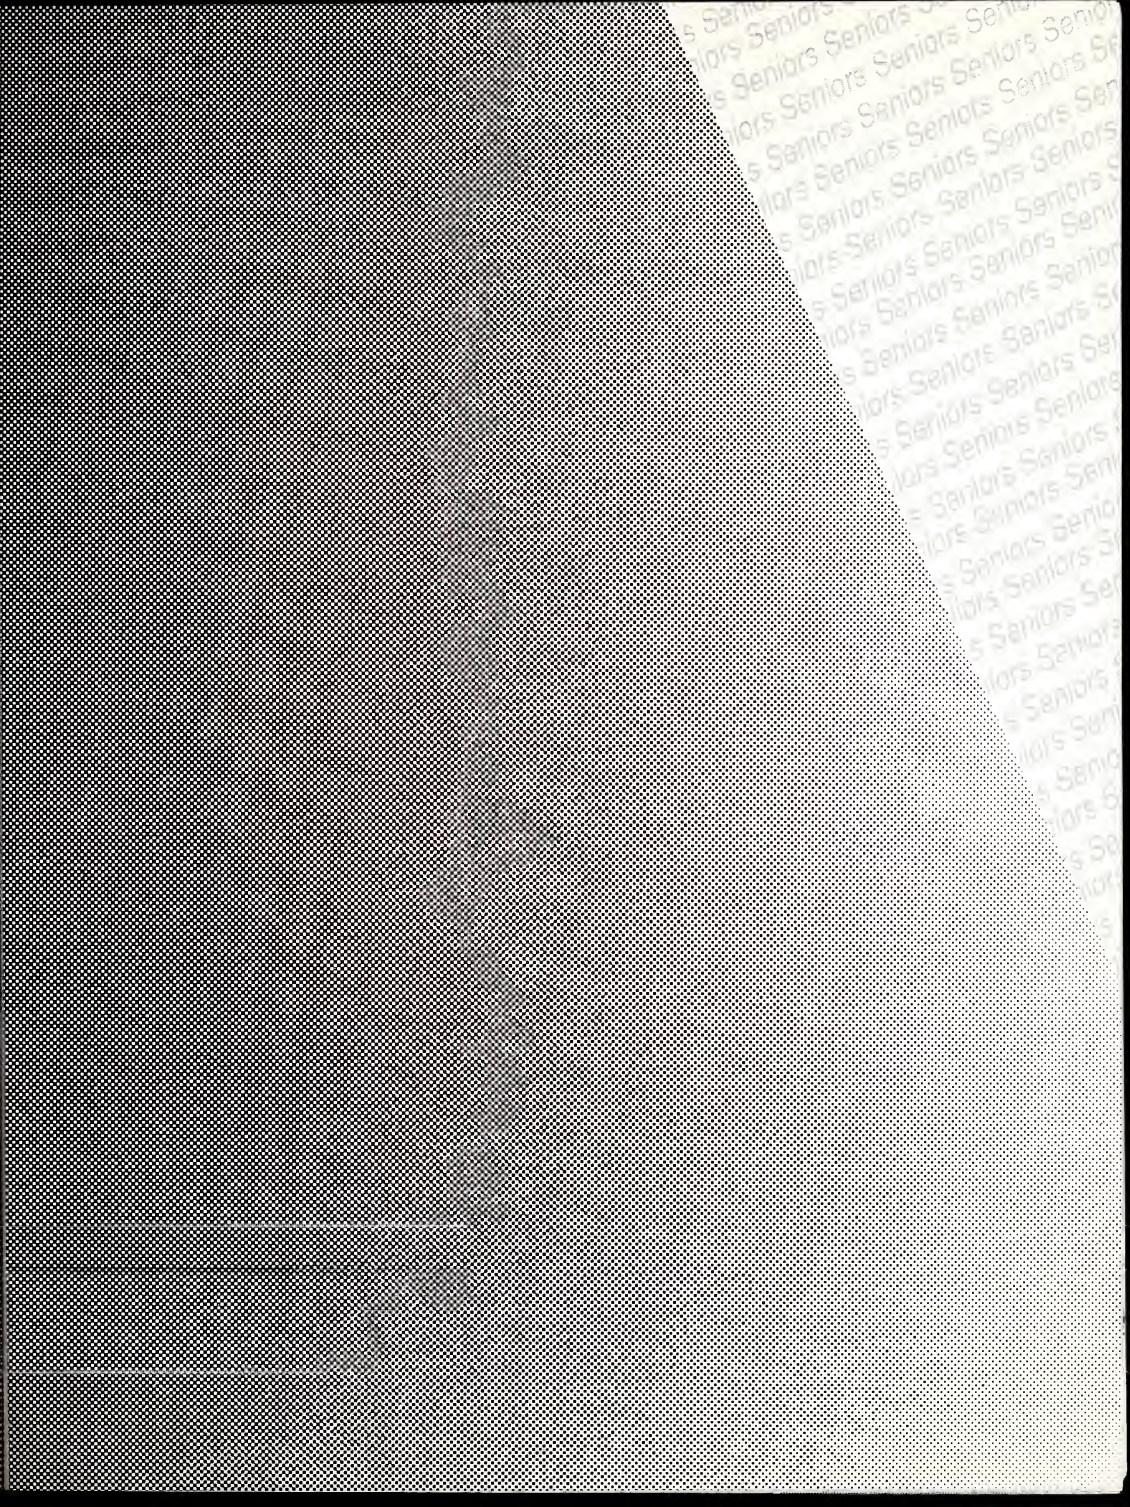

Tonya Caldwell
"Don't ever let your friends put you in a laundry basket."

Jayson Feltz
"Can I curl my tongue?
Only for the right person."

Brian Fireman
"Definitely something...ribbed."

This book is dedicated to all the folk who make up The Colorado College. In our design, we have attempted to interpret the distinct flow of CC; that is, the tendencies of students to exist in certain spheres, rather than in strictly demarcated "sections". We feel that those kind of divisions would not be truly indicative of our way of life. I trust that the 1989 Nugget will present to you a clear reminder of CC's Peak Experience.

According to a representative, the residents "promote greater understanding of kids' problems in an interesting and informal manner."

Some of the group's activities included a Halloween festival, a Christmas party, and an Easter Egg hunt. Much of its work was done in conjunction with The Headstart Program, which is designed to help under-privileged pre-school children.

A number of speakers were also invited to the house, and in January the group hosted a seminar on careers with children.

At the end of the year they held a volleyball and frisbee tournament as a fundraiser for next year's activities.

BACCHUS

Circle K

"Community Service" was the phrase most accurately describing the purpose of Circle K International. Its members volunteered their time to make the relationship between C.C. and the Colorado Springs community the best possible. One of the principal tasks taken on by Circle K was assisting the trainers at Acts 19:11, a therapeutic horse-riding ranch for handicapped children. The members also supported Heifer International, an organization which provided food, seed, and tools for the impoverished people in America and around the world. Circle K was a busy organization throughout the year, volunteering time in hospitals, working for Silver Key, participating in the March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon, and assisting with the Special Olympics in April. Circle K is the college-level affiliate of the Kiwanis Club International.

Rebecca Knight, the 1988-89 BACCHUS President clearly stated the BACCHUS philosophy when she said, "Students play a uniquely effective role in encouraging their peers to consider and develop responsible habits and attitudes in their behavior toward the use and non-use of alcoholic beverages." BACCHUS, a national student organization (Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students), advocated informed, independent decision-making and respect concerning the choices made by college students concerning the use of alcohol. The main activity sponsored by BACCHUS was national Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, which ran October 16-22, 1988. The principal events of NCAAW included a Balloon Launch to salute Colorado's sober drivers, a "Drink With the Deans" Coffeehouse, a "Mocktail" designing contest, a 5K Fun Run, and training sessions for beerending and BACCHUS Bar tending.

K.E.E.P.

K.E.E.P., Kare Enough about Elderly People, was an on-campus organization committed to providing companionship and performing a variety of services for many elderly people in the Colorado Springs community. In addition to working with elderly people, K.E.E.P. promoted awareness of the issues affecting the elderly through a series of lectures addressing the concerns of the aged.

"Between the idea and the reality
... falls the shadow."
- T.S. Eliot

ENACT

ENACT provided students with the "opportunity to work together" addressing C.C.'s environmental concerns. According to Sarah Blexrud, one of the organization's co-chairs, this end was accomplished through the means of "education and direct action." ENACT had a number of projects which ran throughout the year, two of which were the recycling services and awareness campaigns to "reduce resource waste within the C.C. community." ENACT is an acronym for "Environmental Action."

Service Organizations

Writing Center

The Writing Center, staffed by thirteen students and a full-time director, provided assistance for students and faculty writing papers, theses, and proposals. The student tutors, who took a training course prior to the beginning of the academic year, were available to help with papers at any stage of completion, and their intent was to have students improve their writing skills with every visit to the center. They also provided assistance with the campus word processing programs and the Writer's Workbench analysis program.

Volunteer Action

Volunteer Action celebrated another successful year in 1988. The organization was created to assist elementary-age students recommended for the program by social workers and school administrations. Each college volunteer spent approximately two hours per month participating in activities with their "little siblings." These times of "fun and friendship" included holiday gatherings and special group outings. The college students found a chance to be children again through V/A, and the elementary participants were challenged to cultivate responsible relationships with older people.

Student/Alumni Association

The Student Alumni Association was particularly active in communicating with the alumni of the school, getting them involved in current school activities, and recognizing them at events such as Homecoming. Several of the S/AA activities included the Legacy Luncheon, the Adopt-A-Student program, Homecoming, a talent show, and "Fifty Year Club" festivities. The group's principal goal was to arrange to have the 1990 Regional Conference held at C.C.

"The only way for a reporter to look at a politician is down."

STAR

The Student Admissions Representatives, headed by Nanine Wainwright, were responsible for giving tours of the campus to prospective students, providing overnight accommodations for prospectives, and acting as ambassadors to high schools for C.C. The "Star Core," made up of sophomores, juniors, and seniors, went through an active application and interview process in order to be "official" tour guides and representatives of the school.

Directive Organizations

Arts & Crafts

Arts & Crafts offered classes and events with the goal of providing constructive, creative ways for students to use their "leisure" time. The objective of the classes was to create beautiful and useful items while relaxing and having fun. The classes were organized by the Arts & Crafts Committee, who also arranged a craft sale and show. The show, held in December, gave students the opportunity to earn money for their work, while promoting interaction between C.C. and the Colorado Springs community. Another show was held in the spring, giving artists the opportunity to exhibit their finest works. The classes offered included pottery, jewelry, weaving, Batik, stained glass, spinning, weaving, knitting, Raku, beading, photography, and papermaking.

Extra-Curricular

The Extra-Curricular Committee provided activities designed to complement the campus social climate. The events sponsored by this committee of the Leisure Program included all-campus parties, movie marathons, and events co-sponsored by other students clubs.

CCCA

CCCA was C.C.'s "student government body." Comprised of several facets of the college community, the CCCA "attempted to coordinate the variety of activities and interests on campus," according to President Bill Porter. The organization, formed of several committees, served to provide student input for many of the college's policies. These committees included: The Committee on Committees, which coordinated student involvement in student-faculty committees; the Budget Committee, which allocated student activity funds; the Residential Life and Housing Committee, which assisted the administration with housing policies; the Constitution Committee, whose members chartered new student organizations on campus; the Food Service Committee, which communicated student opinions for the improvement of the food program at C.C.; the Election/Publicity Committee, which coordinated all CCCA public relations and elections; and the Student concerns Committee, open to representing student opinions in student government.

Livesounds

The Livesounds Committee was a fundamental element of the Leisure Program. The members worked to bring diverse musical entertainment to the campus. Some of the performers included Arlo Guthrie, a world-renowned folk singer. David Lindley and El Rayo X fused reggae, blues, and rock, while Electric Third Rail represented groovy new Boulder Music. A local band, Dogtooth Violet, also performed, due to the efforts of the Livesounds Committee.

Great Performers & Ideas

The Great Performers and Ideas Committee promoted an awareness of traditional, contemporary, and cross-cultural arts by sponsoring the Great Performers Series, several symposia, the Thursday-At-Eleven lecture series, and a wide range of co-curricular student projects. The committee also funded student activities in the arts. The 1988-89 Great Performers Series included a wide range of performances, ranging from the Seattle Mime Theatre and "Urban Bush Women" to Allison Eldridge, Cello, and Eliot Fisk, Classical Guitar, to Håkan Hagegård, Baritone, and Jeffrey Kahane, Pianist. Each event was widely attended, not only by C.C. students, but by the Colorado Springs community as well.

Shove Council

The Shove Council provided a forum for students to discuss their philosophical issues, social concerns, and ethical considerations. They provided Sunday services for Christian worship, both non-denominational services in the morning and Catholic masses at night. Finally, the members offered their services to the Colorado Springs community through numerous volunteer activities.

Cultural Organizations

Black Student Union

The Black Student Union's primary objective was to provide a support group for its members on campus. Participants could meet at almost any time to discuss their concerns at C.C. or "just to talk." Delores Haines, the Union's chair, also stressed the club's importance in educating the campus community and the BSU members about minority issues, both local and international, as well as Black History and minority leaders in Colorado. BSU sponsored Black History Month in February and was one of several organizations coordinating the "Rainbow Jam" in November.

A.S.I.A.

The Association of Students Interested in Asia was made up of both students and faculty, who all shared a common interest in Asia. The goal of the organization was to discuss cultural, political, economic, and scientific aspects of the continent, as well as to promote awareness of Asian issues through a variety of events, which included the "Rainbow Jam" in November, a number of guest speakers, dance performances, and movies. The group also sponsored Asian Awareness Week and the Asian Film Festival.

International Student Organization

GALA

The Gay and Lesbian Alliance committed itself to helping people "come out" in a harsh environment. The organization was a support group, as well as a political group involved with increasing awareness of issues concerning gay men and lesbians. They also held "straight" night discussion groups. The group also sponsored Gay and Lesbian Pride Week, as well as helping bisexuals and individuals actively questioning their sexuality to discuss their concerns and feelings in a confidential forum.

MEChA

MEChA, a national student organization, was developed to address the needs and concerns of Hispanics, Chicanos, and Latinos in higher education. MEChA volunteered the efforts of its members in the Colorado Springs community, discussed ways in which to increase recruitment of qualified Hispanics as students and as faculty. The organization held forums to discuss issues pertinent to the Hispanic community, such as the proposal concerning English as the Official language of the State of "Red." MEChA, whose name is an acronym for Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlán, was one of the sponsors of the "Rainbow Jam," a function designed to make students aware of the many diversified organizations on campus.

Interest Organizations

Aikido

Aikido is a Japanese martial art based on principals designed to resolve conflict in a non-violent manner. The club emphasized that it was not solely a physical activity: It also involves ethical philosophy. "Aikido," according to Liesl King, "takes pacifism one step beyond its normal definition because, while one is not harming an attacker, one is also not allowing oneself to be harmed." The organization hosted speakers - black belts from other dojos - and visited training seminars around the state.

CCCAA

In it's fourth year of activism at C.C., the Colorado College Community Against Apartheid actively sought to engage students in discussion about southern Africa. One of the primary issues addressed by the organization was C.C.'s investments in South Africa. CCCAA sponsored lectures, panel discussions, debates, rallies, letter-writing campaigns, and teach-ins in order to educate the college community of the problems faced in South Africa and to spur political action on campus.

CCAP

College Citizens Active for Peace cited its purpose as "action." Karen Hixon, the organization's chair, explained, "We want to get people (students) moving." CCAP members assisted other peace activist organizations in their activities throughout the year. An active club, CCAP participated in the Colorado Peace Walk, the monthly Rocky Flats Peace Walks, the October Action at Lowry Air Force Base, the actions at the Nevada nuclear weapons testing site, the Walk-A-Thon for El Salvador, the AIDS Walk-A-Thon, and staffed a Rape Crisis Hotline for the Colorado College community. In addition, the members sponsored Central American Awareness Week and publicized the speech by Father Daniel Berrigan presented in the fall. Karen Hixon also cited the long-range goals of the club: "End the Nuclear Arms Race, end SDI, end hunger, end war, and end violence."

Feminist Collective

The Feminist collective set as its primary goal the education of C.C. students concerning women's issues. "Awareness" was the key term, according to Katherine Morris, the organization's representative. The Feminist Collective met weekly, while sponsoring a Women's Support Group in conjunction with several counselors at Boettcher Health Center. The members of the organization also aimed to increase interaction between students and faculty, especially in relation to feminist issues. The Feminist Collective coordinated its efforts with those of several other women's organizations to recognize National Women's Week on campus.

Psychological Society

The Psychology Society exposed psychology majors and the C.C. community to the various aspects of and perspectives on current psychology practices and theories. They invited a variety of guest lecturers from the Colorado Springs community, as well as other parts of the nation to speak on topics ranging from clinical and experimental fields in psychology to career advice for current majors. The organization also provided psychology majors with the chance to formally present their research projects and theses to C.C.

Outdoor Recreation Committee

The Leisure Program at C.C. was the opportunity for students to "get away from" their strict academic schedules. Students participating in ORC activities took advantage of the Sangre de Cristo and San Juan mountain ranges nearly every Block Break. The Committee sponsored over ten Freshfolk Outdoor Orientation Trips, as well as expanded Leadership Training Programs to certify new leaders. ORC provided the chance to escape metropolitan Colorado Springs and be "free" in the "back country."

"Space is merely a device to prevent everything from being in the same

-Tom Robbins

Political Union

The Political Union was a non-partisan organization which reflected the prevalent political issues and philosophies of C.C. students. The organization established themes for each block, such as the "Press Influence on Politics" and "Women's Issues in Politics," giving students the opportunity to discuss the issues and learn about them from guest speakers scheduled by the union. The Political Union also sponsored debates during the presidential election and an "Election Night" party on November 8.

Religious Organizations

Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship

The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship was an organization dedicated to promoting spiritual growth, informal fellowship, Christian ministry, and open discussion of topics relative to Christianity. The Fellowship stressed the fact that it was not affiliated with any particular denomination, and was therefore an open forum for college students to explore the Christian faith on campus. The organization sponsored several bible studies on campus, in order to give students the opportunity to discuss Christian faith. during first block, and the New Student Orientation in "The Evolution of Uncertainty." IVCF presented a panel discussion on Evolution-Creation from a Christian viewpoint. The panel featured Drs. Frank Cassel, John Vayhinger, and Eldon Hitchcock.

Seekers

Seekers was a Christian fellowship that organized Bible studies, mid-week "Focus" meetings, Sunday morning classes, as well as backpack trips, retreats, and ski outings. In addition, as the group emphasized community, the members visited nursing homes and the soup kitchen in downtown Colorado Springs. Chaverim Channukah Party

Chaverim

Chaverim served two principal purposes at C.C. First, the members celebrated various Jewish holidays as a community, as they were away from home. The organization also provided a forum for discussing issues of concern to the members, such as anti-Semitism and intolerance on the C.C. Campus and the Israeli conflict. Secondly, Chaverim was an educational group. Membership was open to non-Jewish students as well as Jewish, in order to educate students about the background of the Jewish faith and culture. Chaverim's events were often scheduled in conjunction with holidays, such as a Chanukkah party in the first week of December, a Purim celebration in March, a Passover Seder in April, and the recognition of Holocaust memorial Week the first week in May.

Leviathan

The Disparaging Eye

The Disparaging Eye was a journal of political, social, and scientific thought, and was published monthly. Remember, the Disparaging Eye is watching you.

The editors of the Leviathan, Lisa Betty and Stephanie Bryson, re-defined the purpose of the campus' literary magazine for the 1988-89 academic year. They chose to stress artistic expression in as many media as possible. Throughout the year, students had the opportunity to submit their literary works, photographs, and drawings for publication. Early in the year the editors set the goal of publishing a musical album featuring campus musical groups.

"There is hardly a paragraph in this jangled saga that wasn't produced in a last-minute, teeth-grinding frenzy. There was never enough time. Every deadline was a crisis."

The Native American Student Association was a support group for Native American students on campus, designed to counter the members' feelings of alienation. The second goal of the organization was to promote minority awareness. The group accomplished this goal by inviting guest lecturers to address Native American issues in the southwest.

Olympic

The entire world looked forward in anticipation to the 1988 Summer Olympics, which were held in Seoul, Korea. During over two weeks of continuous events, the United States was represented well by such gold medal athletes as Greg Louganis, who earned his third Olympic gold medal despite an accident in which he hit the back of his head on the diving board. Jeff Blatnick also earned a gold medal, his in Greco-Roman wrestling. A third successful American athlete was Janet Evans, a 17-year-old swimmer from California, who won important races in the 400 Meter Medley and 400 Meter Freestyle.

Vote

After a long and grueling campaign, the election finally arrived. The evening of November 8 saw a wide variety of emotions on the C.C. campus. The political tension had grown to be quite heated, as the college community was strongly divided.

By the beginning of November, the election had been debated, re-debated, and debated "the way it should have been." Each decision was different, and nobody could really agree on a winner. Everybody just had to wait until the nation made its decision.

George Bush was elected to be the forty-first President of the United States, and Dan Quayle, his running mate, was to be the Vice President.

By the end of the evening, it was clear that George Bush had earned 426 electoral votes to Michael Dukakis' 112: An apparent landslide, but not so comforting to the students who pointed out that Bush and Quayle defeated the Dukakis/Bentsen ticket by only a 51 to 49% margin in the popular vote.

Perhaps one of the most conclusive statements made by one supporter of the Democratic candidate was, "The election has turned me to religion. I will now pray for the health of George Bush daily." On the other hand, a Bush supporter stressed that he, "thoroughly believed George Bush would be the 'Education President.'"

Drought

The summer of 1988 was marked by the worst drought in 50 years of United States history. The dry, hot weather stretched from California to Georgia, and from Canada to Texas. Thirty states declared federal emergencies, and many midwest farmers lost up to 75% of their crops.

Many states set record temperatures during the summer - and continuous weeks of record temperatures. The fire season also began two months early, which many people felt contributed to the fires in Yellowstone National Park which lasted throughout most of the summer.

The Mississippi River was at an extremely low level, trapping numerous boats and barges carrying paper, grain, and chemicals to market.

The drought was the principal cause of an unaccountable financial loss, which extended from farm subsidies to extensive damages to property and crops.

Intimate conversations

The Colorado College Symposium held January 9-14, 1989, featured several important American social thinkers, who dealt with many varied topics connected to the theme of intimacy.

Monday morning in Packard Hall was the opening of the Symposium, with writers Vivian Gornick and John Lahr speaking on the topic of "Mothers and Daughters/Fathers and Sons." Benjamin De Mott spoke that afternoon on "The Pursuit of Feeling" in our society, and on the import of the constructive imagination in this pursuit. The Deamarest Lloyd Memorial Lecturer, Ellen Gilchrist, spoke that evening of intimacy in one of the prominent characters in her short stories, Norma Jean.

On Tuesday morning, each of Monday's speakers were available for coffee and conversation. Holly Clayson spoke on the topic "Images of Intimacy during the times of 'Sexual' Plague: Now and in the 19th Century." After lunch, Michael Newcomb spoke of the alternative of cohabitation with interested students, faculty and townfolk. Later, Harry Stein asked the question, "The

New Man; Who Wants Him?"

Tuesday's speakers were available on Wednesday morning for conversation, while Margaret Clark addressed the student body directly in her speech, "College Students and Intimacy: What Difference does Personality Make?" Germain Grisez's lecture on "True Intimacy and Its Counterfeits" from a Christian perspective was given on Wednesday afternoon. Bernie Zilbergeld spoke later on the topic "Men, Women, Sex, and Intimacy: Different Strokes, Common Misunderstandings." Finally, Richard Dawkins recalled "Ancestral Voices" in his speech.

Harumi Befu spoke on "Intimacy and Love Reconsidered: A Comparison of Japan and the United States" on Thursday morning; following lunch lunch Molly Haskell contrasted intimacy and romance in the movies. Robert Sernberg then addressed the changing effect of time on relationships in his talk, "Intimacy, Passion, Commitment: The Triangle of Love."

On the final afternoon of Symposium, Saul Schanberg discussed the biological aspects of parental intimacy in "Parents, Touching and the Brain."

Poetic interpretations

The Colorado College Symposium on Intimacy was marked deeply by the presence of three women poets, all of whom gave readings on Friday, January 13.

Annie Dillard entertained a full house in Packard Auditorium that morning, reading from her Pulitzer Prize winning Pilgrim at Tinker Creek and focusing intently and humorously on intimacy with nature. Dillard presented the audience poems on aging, dermatology, and the unheard of shortness of snails.

Joy Harjo and Angela Jackson read for throngs of students, faculty, and community members in Tutt Atrium on Friday, bringing to light their perceptions of intimacy in art and in their own poems.

Joy Harjo began the reading in her wind-like, chanting voice, reminiscent of her Native American background in the Creek tribe. A prayer ended this reading of her timeless poetry.

Angela Jackson then commenced to, as one observer described it "bring the audience to their knees, rolling and laughing with her at the characters" she portrayed in her poems, notably "[The man with] a white liver/ he a killin love giver," and "Mrs. Sheba Williams," whose voice Jackson assumed to read the piece. Both artists commented on the Symposium on Intimacy's affect on their thinking in relation to their work; Jackson stated that thinking about the "I" word had helped her to understand her poetry as an expression of the intimacy inherent in art.

A rtistic endeavors

The creative interpretations of intimacy during Symposium expressed through movies, art, and concert performances.

The first movie of the week was "Manhattan," directed by Woody Allen. The following day was filled with "Holiday," directed by George Cukor, "Wild Strawberries," directed by Ingmar Bergman, and "Toyko Story," directed by Yasujiro Ozu. The week continued with East of Eden," directed by Eliakazan, "La Strada," directed by Fedirco Felline, and "Sunday Bloody Sunday," directed by John Schlesinger. The last two films were "His Girl Friday," directed by Howard Hawks and "My Life as a Dog," directed by Lasse Hallstrom.

Also during the week, the display entitled "Intimate Reflections" was set up in Coburn Gallery. Eight Colorado artists were invited to present their work and views of intimacy: Irene Delka, Luis Eades, Robert Ecker, Sally Elliot, Jill Englebart, Virginia Johnson, Linda Lowry, and Trudy Shelly. The artwork varied from pastel drawings, to miniature photos, to larger than life oil paintings.

Symposium Director Eli Boderman also invited three performing groups. First to perform was Ramanovsky and Phillips, gaysinger-songwriters. Their two hour performance, on Tuesday, January 10, was filled with humorous, touching and frank songs about homosexuality. They often had the audience wrapped up in laughter with their little stories about the origins of the songs, and a poll taken during the concert to find out "who in the audience have had parents?" Perhaps one of the most striking things about them was their attire. Ron Ramanovsky wore, for the first half, a black jumpsuit covered with paint splatters, and for the second half, tight black leather pants, a cut-off sleeve sweat-shirt with zippers on the front, and had his black hair spiked. Paul Phillips wore black pants, a black muscle shirt and a dressy white satin, sleeveless, jacket, and around his neck and wrists brilliant diamond chains and bracelets. In one ear he wore a long hooped diamond chain earring. For the second half he wore a black and white mini dress with a white Bolo jacket.

The performance by Weeden, Finkle and Fay on Thursday began with their running in, heads covered with cloths reminiscent of the symposium theme picture. They are a corporate society performing group. When invited to play for businesses, they write new music for the company for whom they are performing. An example was the song they had written for BMW, and performed at the concert, called "Ergonomics." For the symposium, they did not write a song themselves, but got short phrases and 4 notes from the audience and create a song on "intimacy."

Symposium week ended with a performance by Uncle Bonsai, well known for its songs, "Penis Envy" and "Boys Want Sex in the morning." There was a large turn out of community members at the concert. The songs ranged from "Doug goes Home," from the Doug Series, to an acapella rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner" (due to the unfortunate demise of a guitar string).

A common cause

Feminism: The theory of the political, economic, and social equality of the sexes (according to the Merriam-Webster Dictionary). The C.C. definition read: A vocal issue, calling for the recognition of women as equals in society. Women and men alike joined forces in organization, such as in the Feminist Collective, to express frustration and anger at the social structure which forced women into subordinate positions socially, economically, and politically.

One particular group of students, a Feminist Performance Class, expressed its anger in a controversial presentation. The production was given in the Worner Center on October 24, and the tapes of women expressing anger, films portraying the exploitation of women, skits displaying violent actions toward women, and posters depicting statistics concerning women's roles in economic society spurred mixed reactions from the C.C. community. Some students reacted positively, their anger being directed toward the wrongs of society toward women; others were angered by the performance itself, believing that the manner in which the presentation was made was contrary to the class's goals; a final group reacted in sarcasm, declaring the following week "Radical Feminist Awareness Week."

The class, directed by Professor Joanne Kleine, also hosted Phyllis Jane Rose, the author of The Crystal Quilt: Feminist Political Theatre, who spoke on the planning process of feminist performances.

The Feminist Collective presented a less militant forum for women to express their frustrations with an oppressive society. The Collective sponsored weekly meetings, hosting speakers who addressed means of changing the views of society and encouraging complete equality for women. A women's support group was also a product of the Feminist Collective.

The administration also supported women's issues on campus, sponsoring such events as a symposium on campus safety. In addition to the lecture at the beginning of the year, the symposium served as an educational service and open forum for discussion of the Escort Service, lighting on campus, and information about campus incidents which were not reported. Several campus officials were on hand to address the students' concerns, including Dean Laurel McLeod; Paul Jones, Assistant Director of Residential Life; Clane Cowart, Director of the Physical Plant; and Lee Parks, Chief of Security.

Many people were involved in the feminist issue, and it served as a common concern for many students to become actively involved on campus, whether through feminist performances, support groups, authoring letters and articles for the Catalyst, or simply discussing concerns and making more people aware of the goals of feminism.

"What happens to a dream deferred?
Does it dry up like a raisin in the sun?...Or does it explode?"

-Langston Hughes

Hunger

Campus interest was only the first element of Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week at C.C. The event's coordinators stressed involvement as the primary goal.

The week began with a concert by Arlo Guthrie, to which people were asked to "bring clothes." No, the signs were not addressing nude concert-goers. They were requesting donations to kick off the Clothing Drive, the result of which was a donation from C.C. at a Denver rally for the homeless in November.

Later in the week, the campus sponsored a fast for Oxfam, in which students voluntarily gave up meals. The money normally used to prepare the meals was donated to two organizations. Fifty percent was given to Oxfam, and the remaining half was donated to the Bijou Soup Kitchen. The fast was broken Wednesday evening in Shove Chapel, after which Thomas Roberts addressed the participants on "The Business of Hunger."

Participants in Oxfam break their fast in Shove Chapel on Thursday, November 18.

While the Livesounds committee was extremely active in bringing popular performers to the campus for students and faculty alike to enjoy, three performers stood out the most in the minds and ears of students and faculty.

The first of the performers in this group was David Lindley, who came to campus in the late fall. He performed for a small crowd, but the group was so enthusiastic that they stood and danced from the first song ("Poppa was a Rolling Stone") to the finale, "Werewolves from London", with his band, El Rayo X.

Another popular concert was performed by Electric Third Rail. One of the lead singers "opened her heart up to the crowd" when she spoke of her concerns for the world and for its individuals with the bassist's accompaniment as the lead guitarist replaced a broken string. The crowd enjoyed the evening which began with C.C.'s own Dogtooth Violet.

Perhaps one of the most well-known performers to entertain C.C. students and faculty was Arlo Guthrie, who performed at the The Fine Arts Center on November 13. The show sold out in four hours, and the crowd delighted in Guthrie's folksy monologue, not to mention his "well thought-out hair." The crowd left in rapture after hearing songs including "Amazing Grace", "Darkest Hour", and, unbelievably, "Alice's Restaurant".

Music! Food! Dancing! Free! Six organizations of "ethnic" students and faculty threw a party on November 16, 1988. MEChA, ISO, NASA, ASIA, Chaverim, and BSU made piles of food, hired Sapphire, a popular local band, arranged for BACCHUS to serve "mock-tails", and invited the campus community in to jam! The outrageous party lasted from 9 to 12, three hours of fiesta in recognition of the varied student body at CC - a quite active diverse student community. "This is great!" commented one student. "I didn't realize there were so many active ethnic organizations here!" "That's the point," was the answer from a MEChA member.

n sync

Gamma Phi Beta sponsored their second annual "Lip Sync" on Friday, September 23 during a picnic dinner. The winners, Amy Sparrow, Joe McBreen, Kathy Leadbetter and Lynette Gudicello, performed to the song "Muscles." Other acts included "Wild West," "Don't Be Cruel," "We've Got the Beat," "Satisfaction," and "I've got you Babe." The Grand Prize, donated by Rub-A-Dub Spa Sales and Rentals, was a large hot tub. The money raised was donated to the sororities charity, Easter Seals.

D ivest ?!

The issue of Apartheid in South Africa was emphasized in 1988 most heavily by CCCAA, who sponsored a number of events to increase campus awareness of Apartheid and C.C.'s policy on investments in companies doing business in South Africa.

On Friday, November 11, a number of C.C. students rallied outside the Worner Center and the annual Board of Trustees meeting. The students called for complete divestment. The board did approve a policy for selective divestment: "Procedures for Evaluating Companies doing Business in South Africa." The purpose of the policy was to evaluate the companies' business records and make individual decisions concerning divestment, dependent on the evaluations.

CCCAA also sponsored speakers, such as Professor Elizabeth Schmidt of Macalester College, who address issues such as "Isolating South Africa: C.C. and Apartheid," and "Women Under Apartheid." The organization also presented the movie, Qry Freedom in order to increase awareness of the issue in the campus community.

B lood...

The Fraternity of Beta Theta Pi held its fifth annual blood drive during the second week of fourth block, working with trained personnel from Penrose, Memorial, and St. Francis hospitals. A great many students participated in the blood drive, giving the gift of life to those in need during the often dangerous holiday season.

To thank those who donated blood, the fraternity brothers sponsored their recently-initiated tradition, the Beta Blood Bash, complete with live music, pizza and beer. The party-goers danced and raged at the fitting conclusion to the drive.

B ravo

The Great Performances Series was sponsored by Great Performers and Ideas. The organization's purpose was to expose students to a variety of classical and modern performances. A number of performances were given, approximately one each block.

The first visiting group was the Seattle Mime Theatre, a non-traditional mime performance group. They presented a number of skits, impromptu scenes, and several spoken stories. The finale was a presentation of "20th Century Vector Movements," in which they demonstrated remarkable skills showing the movements people make on stairs, escalators, and elevators, as well as "sliding" one performer's head across the small screen behind which she "appeared."

Another performer was baritone soloist Håkan Hagegård. He, after giving the Thursday-at-Eleven in an informal setting, performed several numbers in Swedish and German, displaying the talent he earlier proved in Mozart's The Magic Flute.

Allison Eldridge performed a solo cello recital near the end of second block. The C.C. campus was able to relate well to Allison because she was only eighteen years old; a child prodigy who had performed with the cello from a very young age.

Duo a Quattro Mani was the final performance first semester, featuring two pianists. Susan Grace and Alice Slavich presented a series of duets to end the semester of productions.

Playful acts

Students looking for a "study break" the final weekend of Block 2 had the perfect opportunity, provided by the Theatre Department: Look Back In Anger, a John Osborne drama was presented on October 21-24. Directors Jim Malcolm and Richard Seer were praised by the actors, who considered the play "well-directed."

The lead role of Jimmy Porter was played by Tom Cramer; His wife, Alison, was portrayed by Wendy Hodgson; Celia Books played the role of Helena; Jay Marx was Cliff; and Christopher Schultz played the part of Colonel Redfern.

The dramatic performance, described as "very British," centered on Jimmy, the "angry young man" popular in mid-fifties' British theatre. Through his actions and relationships, he addresses the conflicts between social classes and the communication between women and men.

The first weekend of November was the performance time for Tom Stoppard's The Real Thing, a play which addresses the issues of fidelity and relationships. The student director was Caren Hartenstein, who was assisted by Rochelle Spector.

The production, which intrigued the audience by opening with a "play within a play," featured Rob Peck and Rachel Pollack in the lead roles of Henry and Annie; Jonathan Knight as Max, Karen Caplan as Charlotte, Gordon Scott as Brody, Kalle Matso as Billy; and Lorie Buckley as Debbie.

According to one of the actors, the play emphasized the need to search for the "right" person in their lives ... the "real thing."

Taking the Challenge

"In general, this team has the best talent assembled in the history of women's soccer at CC."

This statement, from Coach Dang Pibulvech, is indicative of the extremely high quality of CC's Division I soccer team. The women reached the NCAA quarterfinals. MaryClaire Robinson added, "The level of play has increased, we have better players, we can relate better on the field... with all these factors meshing together we have a better work level than before. And at this level - playing national top 6 teams - we have to mesh together or, in even one breakdown, these teams can capitalize on that and score."

The CC women fought valiantly into double overtime at the disappointing end of a great season, heads held high.

"It's a lot easier if you love the sport. If we didn't, we could never be this dedicated."

- Karla Thompson

"The team is incredible ... there's a lot of chemistry."

- Robin Neigel

Reaching the Top

The Men's NCAA Division III Soccer team returned from a three-week tour of China ready to tackle a new season. Coach Horst Richardson was optimistic about his 23rd year coaching soccer, encouraging the men to "win every game." One of the team's most outstanding players, Kristian Sundborn exemplified his team's competitive efforts in the battle against Division I New Mexico - a game in which the Tiger's returned to Colorado victorious, 3-1 being the final score.

Keep it Up!

Optimism was the key word, as the Volleyball team began its season. The women were vying for their fourth consecutive appearance in the NCAA Division III playoffs. Coach Susan Bethanis stated that the team's ultimate goal was to improve the 1987 record and "continue the winning reputation" in the new season. Certainly the team was a successful contender nationally, ranked #7 through most of the season.

We've Got Spirit!

Time was running out, and we were still nine points behind. The crowd at the Homecoming Football Game went wild as the Tigers scored a touchdown in what seemed to be the nick of time. Two points to go ... a field goal would do it, if only ... The Millsaps lost the football, and CC had a chance again! But, at the last second, the field goal attempt fell short, and the game was lost, 17-15. The team did recover, however, and CC's 106th football season was not a complete loss, ending in a battle with Colorado School of Mines - the oldest football rivalry west of the Mississippi. And the fans were there ...

Force Be With You

It was a fight nearly to the finish, as CC's Erik Browning raced to the finish at the CC Invitational meet, a principal event at Homecoming. While Erik took second in the race, the team placed third overall at the tournament, typical of its high ranking throughout the season. Coach Ted Castaneda attributed the team's success to the transition from low-key, casual workouts to a more demanding daily routine. By the end of the season, the coach was certain that the cross country team had "established itself as a force to be dealt with."

The Women's team proved to be competitive as well. They placed among the top teams at several meets. For example, they ranked second in Saline, Kansas. Coach Joani Schofield led the efforts of this NCAA Division III team. She accredited much of the team's success to the high-altitude running the team did, a benefit at "flat-lander" meets.

Hockey

1988 was the fiftieth anniversary of Tiger Hockey, the first hockey game being held in January of 1938. The C.C. team lost its first challenge to a team sponsored by a Colorado Springs department store, but in 1950 C.C. took the NCAA championship. 1987 was an eventful season, as well, with the Tigers defeating the University of Denver (the traditional hockey rival) in the opening round of the WCHA playoffs.

The hockey team worked under the direction of a new coach, Brad Buetow, who transferred to C.C. from U.S. International.

Although the Tigers lost to D.U. in the first two games, they set out to better prepare themselves for the February "rematch."

one another."

Women's Basketball

Women's basketball was a relatively new sport at C.C., having been organized in 1975. The team advanced itself to NCAA Division III status in 1983.

Coach Beth Branson entered her fourth year of coaching the team with quite a task in front of her: The team had struggled through a "mediocre" season in 1987, but looked to the 1988 season with a sense of optimism.

Some of the most formidable opponents met by the team included the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, Claremont, Pomona, and the University of Chicago.

"Keep away from people who try to belittle your ambitions. Small people always do that, but the really great make you feel that you, too, can become great."
-Mark Twain

Men's Basketball

The men's basketball team began its ninetieth year at C.C. in 1988, having been founded only seven years after the invention of the game.

C.C. was one of the founders of the Rocky Mountain Conference in 1909, but became independent of the league in 1963.

A Division III team, the Tigers were under the direction of a new head coach from Cornell University, Al Walker.

Men's Swimming

The swimming and diving teams at C.C. were directed by Jerry Lear (in his 26th year at C.C.) and Tom Weir (a newcomer to the C.C. staff).

The captains of the team were Tom Hackett and Tom Smith, who led the veteran varsity squad in meets the Universities of Colorado and Denver, as well as the School of Mines.

Coach Lear anticipated an "outstanding class of [freshfolk to] supply additional depth" for the team, and to break a number of school records.

Women's Swimming

The Women's Swim team competed against a variety of Division II and Division III teams, including the Air Force Academy and the University of Northern Colorado.

Coach Joani Schofield had competitive season in 1987, finishing with a 6-5 record, so she prompted the women on her team to improve upon the record in 1988.

Alpine Skiing

The Alpine Ski team, C.C.'s only co-ed athletic team, has competed for nearly twenty years against Colorado schools and other members of the Rocky Mountain Collegiate Ski Conference.

Coach Randy Pratt emphasized that the team was goal-oriented, putting the group effort before individual performances, in an effort to improve the team's scores in competition.

"[The poverty rate] has begun to decline, but it is still going up."
-Ronald Reagan

"Anybody can be wrong occasionally,
but only true
exceptional people can make an entire career of it."

-Ashleigh Brilliant

Colophon: 750 copies of The Colorado College's ninetieth volume of the yearbook, now called The Nugget, were printed by Herff-Jones Publishing Company in Logan, Utah. All copy was composed with the use of Macintosh computers, Microsoft Word 3.01, Aldus Pagemaker 3.01, and MacPaint.

The cover is embossed silver; artwork is by Lara Bishop. Endsheets are 100% silver Vivracolor, on 140 pound paper stock.

Ninety pound matte and gloss stock papers were used on black and white and color pages, respectively.

Staff and guest photographers took and printed black and white photographs; 30-Minute Photo of Colorado Springs printed four-color photos.

Good-Bye, in the words of the Staff ...

The word Love is over-used and abused. It is time to invent new words to express the variety of our emotions.

Rest: A four-letter word, taboo in the vocabulary of yearbook staffers, especially after 4 a.m. (and something I look forward to experiencing four years from now!).

Um. Um. Um. (Devilish chuckle). That's what I wanna say. Arhee Arhee Giggle Giggle Snort.

"Great spirits often encounter violent opposition from mediocre minds." (Albert Einstein)

Murphy's laws of thermodynamics:
I Anything that can go wrong will.

II The perversity of the universe tends towards maximum.

"What has perhaps been overlooked is the irrational, the inconsistent, the droll, even the insane, which nature inexhaustibly operative, implants in an individual, seemingly for her own amusement. But these things are singled out only in the crucible of one's own mind." (Albert Einstein)

In the lap of the great mountain, nestled snug

We study, we learn, we play

Expectant, we grow and reach for startling heights

And real depth.

DAVID J. FORD

All around us find joy in our successes

As we prepare

As we ready our minds with education

our hearts with confidence

our bodies with Saga food

For the great big universe waiting only for us

It is then that we are let in on the Big Secrets of Truth, the Absolute, and the Ultimate:

That no such things exist, except in our minds.

We have all three -

Pasts of wild reminiscence;

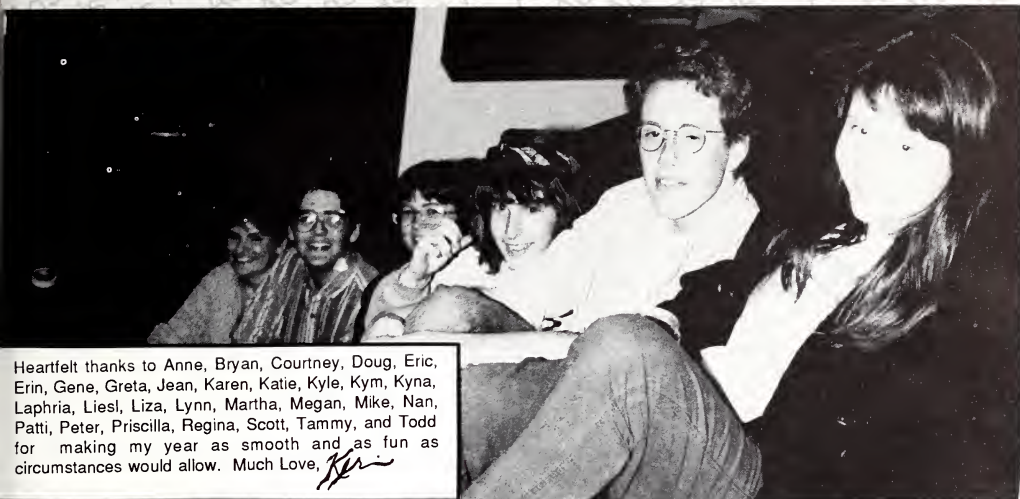

Presents of finals and deadlines and study breaks;

and Futures of bright and awesome promise.

And our little community has given us these, has given us

The Peak Experience.

Heartfelt thanks to Anne, Bryan, Courtney, Doug, Eric, Erin, Gene, Greta, Jean, Karen, Katie, Kyle, Kym, Kyna, Laphria, Liesl, Liza, Lynn, Martha, Megan, Mike, Nan, Patti, Peter, Priscilla, Regina, Scott, Tammy, and Todd for making my year as smooth and as fun as circumstances would allow. Much Love, Ker
